UNIFORM RULES OUTLINED

Judge Dayton outlined from the bench, at Parkersburg, a system of uniform rules for practice in the bankruptcy court, which he expects to prepare with the assistance of the attorneys of the district and the referees in bankruptcy.

The matters in an embryonic state and the court invited suggestions from the members of the bar. The present methods of practice before the referees are rather chaotic and cause all sorts of complications when cases are transferred or appealed. Judge Dayton laid special stress upon the desirability of regulating allowances to receivers and trustees, and indicated that these should be made with great care so as to conserve the interest of the unfortunate debtors and creditors involved.

GREATEST EVER

ARE THE SPRING OPENING AND BARGAIN SALES BEING HELD AT THE WATTS-LAMBERD DEPARTMENT STORE.

The millinery opening and special bargain sales in all departments of the Watts-Lambert Company's department store, on Main street, which began last Thursday, and are to continue all this week have so far been the biggest spring opening event ever held by this big concern. The millinery department has been crowded at all times since the opening and a big run has been made in the beautiful hats composing the line of spring fashions, which the firm claims is the largest and most complete line ever shown by them in any of their previous millinery openings. The bargains in the various departments are also attracting a tremendous patronage. There has been an extraordinary run on the lines of goods most needed for the spring renovation of the household due to the remarkable prices offered on them.

After the close of the war he again settled down to civil life and for a number of years practiced law, as stated above, finally retiring to the country where he spent his remaining days upon his farm, on Little Capon. He was a man of imposing presence, a good speaker when in his vigorous manhood, a fascinating story teller and was a man of great personal popularity. Prior to the war he served several terms in the Virginia legislature, representing this county in the lower house. After the war he was elected and re-elected a number of times to the legislature of this state and was twice chosen Speaker of the House of Delegates.

Deceased was twice married, his second wife, who was Miss Margaret E. Pugh, survives, as do four children, Robert P. Monroe, Mrs. C. W. Haines, Mrs. W. L. Tharp and Miss Anna Monroe. He and four brothers, Col. R. W. Monroe, of Kingwood; James W. Monroe, J. Walker Monroe and Marion Monroe, all late of Harrison county, and two sisters, Mrs. Snapp, of this county, and Mrs. Hugh Garrett, of Harrison county, both of whom survive.

BRIEF HISTORY OF INTEREST

The following obituary notice taken from the Review will prove of interest here:

The most widely known citizen of Hampshire county and one of the very oldest, passed from earth on Thursday night, last, March 16, when Col. Alexander Monroe died. Where was there a man, woman or child, especially a man or woman of the older generation, to whom the face, name and figure of Col. Monroe were not familiar? Born in 1817, he was, therefore, 87 years of age last December.

Col. Monroe was in many respects a remarkable man. He was the oldest of a large family of children upon whose shoulders the care of the entire family was thrown before he was grown.

He kept together the family and not only educated himself under most straitened circumstances but cared for and educated them. He began his teaching school. He studied surveying, became proficient and it is probably no exaggeration to say that he, at some time or other surveyed a majority of the tracts of land in this county. He also studied law, was admitted to the bar and for a number of years practiced before the court of this county. He was also at one time in the newspaper business and owned and edited the Virginia Argus, published here at the outbreak of the war.

At the outbreak of the Civil War the deceased was Colonel of the 114th Virginia militia, which was called in to service by the Governor of Virginia. He commanded that regiment until the spring of 1862, when by an act of the Confederate congress the militia was disbanded. He at once volunteered in the regular Confederate army and was elected major of the 18th Virginia cavalry, belonging to what was known as the North Western Brigade, which was commanded by Gen. John D. Imboden. He occupied that position and served with that regiment to the end of the war. He was a brave soldier, recognized as such by his comrades and by the enemy, and had many narrow escapes from death and capture. Col. Monroe commanded the rear guard of Gen. Lee's army on its sullen retreat from Gettysburg. His duty was to protect the wagon train, which was 27 miles long and he did it discharging the difficult duty assigned him successfully.

After the close of the war he again settled down to civil life and for a number of years practiced law, as stated above, finally retiring to the country where he spent his remaining days upon his farm, on Little Capon. He was a man of imposing presence, a good speaker when in his vigorous manhood, a fascinating story teller and was a man of great personal popularity. Prior to the war he served several terms in the Virginia legislature, representing this county in the lower house. After the war he was elected and re-elected a number of times to the legislature of this state and was twice chosen Speaker of the House of Delegates.

Deceased was twice married, his second wife, who was Miss Margaret E. Pugh, survives, as do four children, Robert P. Monroe, Mrs. C. W. Haines, Mrs. W. L. Tharp and Miss Anna Monroe. He and four brothers, Col. R. W. Monroe, of Kingwood; James W. Monroe, J. Walker Monroe and Marion Monroe, all late of Harrison county, and two sisters, Mrs. Snapp, of this county, and Mrs. Hugh Garrett, of Harrison county, both of whom survive.
